International Contractors was given only 12 weeks to build-out this 110,000 SF office space in downtown Chicago.

Normally this type of project would have been estimated with a 20-week schedule, but by working with a fast-track initiative, ICI was able to condense construction and meet the time constraints IRI had for moving out of their old location.

Designed by the world famous architectural firm Valerio Dewalt Train

Associates, the office called for an interesting marriage of conventional office space and high-end industrial looks.

The remodeled space made use of slanted walls, industrial framing ceiling grids, open ceiling hanging components and a special wall that was metal shingled from floor to ceiling. The design was meant to blend well and give a spacious and functional quality to the finished high-tech office.
